Psychiatry of Cancer, Oncology and Palliative Medicine

Dear Colleagues,

Cancer and its treatment can provoke psychopathology, psychological states beyond the person’s normal experience, in a substantial minority of patients. These individuals may have their first ever experience of delirium, memory problems, hypomania or depression, with all the associated risks, as one important aspect of their cancer journey.

How much do we know about the aetiology of these symptoms? Are effective treatments available? Is this cancer-related morbidity well-managed by existing services? Can mental health care be integrated with oncology and palliative medicine?

This one-day conference brings together senior clinicians and leaders from liaison psychiatry, oncology and palliative medicine to explore these questions, which are now acknowledged as central to patient experience and clinical outcomes in cancer care. It will be of interest to those involved in the design, commissioning and delivery of cancer care, psychological support and liaison mental health services.

We are delighted to welcome Professor Michael Sharpe from the University of Oxford as our keynote speaker and look forward to seeing you in December.

Consultant Liaison Psychiatrist,
